

Idiom by Lon Yan

大言不慚

da4 yan2 bu4 can2

President Donald Trump said in a speech that no US president had done more than him in the first 90 days of their presidency.

But a news agency did a reality check for him, saying that his claim “flies in the face of (悍然無視) history,” as his “legislative victories are minor, surpassed by those of a variety of high achievers in the White House.”

According to the Associate Press report, Trump had, in fact, been quite ineffectual in delivering what he has promised:

“Trump’s tax overhaul and infrastructure plan have yet to reach Congress. His attempt to secure the borders from people from terrorism-prone regions is so far blocked by courts. And his first attempt to repeal and replace President Barack Obama’s health care law failed in Congress.”

We can call Trump “大言不慚” (da4 yan2 bu4 can2).

“大” (da4) is “big,” “言” (yan2) “speech,” “word,” “to say.” “大言” (da4 yan2), as a term, means “to exaggerate,” “to boost.” “不” (bu4) is “no,” “not” and “慚” (can2) “to feel ashamed.” Literally, “大言不慚” (da4 yan2 bu4 can2) is “big words not ashamed.”

The idiom means “to be shamelessly boastful,” “grandiloquence,” “to boast shamelessly,” “to talk big.”

You can use it on insufferable boasters (自吹自擂的人) by telling them: “You really are “大言不慚” (da4 yan2 bu4 can2)!” But beware that this is a rather blunt way of expressing your feelings, so expect to make a new enemy!

Terms containing the character “言” (yan2) include:

言論 (yan2 lun4) – discourse; opinion on public affairs

言語 (yan2 yu3) – spoken language

言行 (yan2 xing2) – words and deeds

失言 (shi1 yan2) – make an indiscreet remark; a slip of tongue; gaffe