Waiting for the tide to turn

The tourism industry in Hong Kong has suffered severely from two major blows in the last seven months. The social unrest starting in June last year has cast a long shadow over the trade, resulting in a 14.2% decline in annual tourist arrivals. But the knock-out blow came just before the Chinese New Year as the Coronavirus crisis started to deteriorate in the Mainland and spread to other regions.

With Hong Kong now in virtual lock-down mode, there is nothing much anybody can do except pray for an early recession in the virus that has plagued the industry on a global basis. Recovery will take time, but if the SARS experience in 2003 is anything to go by, chances are we may emerge from this disaster when temperatures rise in May, if not earlier.

In face of these exceptional challenges, Dr YK Pang, Chairman of the Hong Kong Tourism Board, expresses confidence in Hong Kong’s traditional resilience and continued appeal as a world-class travel destination.

Nobody is giving up on an industry that is well established with strong potentials for growth, and government has pledged additional resources in support of this core industry. If we play our cards right, and make use of the current lull to improve on our infrastructure and address any shortcomings, we shall be able to hit the deck running when the tide turns.

Hong Kong banks on its resilience

After a record year of tourist arrivals in 2018, the local tourism industry took a dive last year with arrival numbers down to 55.9 million, representing a significant year-on-year decline of 14.2%.

Further analyses show that visitor arrivals in the first half-year of 2019 recorded an increase of 13.9%, but the number of visitors started to fall in July due to social incidents, and the decrease worsened in the following months, leading to a decline of 39.1% in the second half of the year.

All source markets recorded a decline of visitors in 2019. The Mainland and short-haul markets recorded a drop of 14.2% and 18.7%, respectively, while long-haul markets and new markets fell 12.7% and 13.5%, respectively. Overnight visitors in 2019 also declined by 18.8% to 23.76 million. Overnight arrivals from the Mainland, the major source destination, declined from close to 20 million in 2018 to 16.22 million last year, a shrinkage of 18.4%.

The Hong Kong Tourism Bureau (HKTB) has already launched promotions in a number of short-haul markets, including India, Indonesia, the Philippines, South Korea, and Thailand, and will soon extend those promotions to other markets such as Japan and long-haul markets. HKTB has also been working tirelessly on a major global promotion that will rebuild Hong Kong’s tourism image and help its tourism industry recover.

HKTB rolled out a brand new tactical campaign named “Hong Kong is ON” early last month to promote over 500 attractive offers on a dedicated online platform, covering flights, hotels, dining, retail, attractions, etc. The campaign is being promoted in various markets to attract visitors to Hong Kong. There has been positive feedback on the campaign, and the offers will be constantly updated to encourage spending from both visitors and locals to benefit different sectors in Hong Kong.

While the entire industry is bracing for the downturn, perhaps we can look back to see what has been accomplished for the past year.

In his 2019 Budget Speech, the Financial Secretary pledged that the Government would continue to join forces with HKTB and the trade to implement the Development Blueprint for Hong Kong’s Tourism Industry released in 2017. Government has allocated an additional sum of around $333 million to enable the HKTB to step up promotion of Hong Kong’s image as a premier tourism destination, entice visitors to experience Hong Kong’s local culture in different districts, and enhance publicity on Hong Kong’s major festivals and events, etc.

Various new initiatives are being rolled out, including:

(a) Enhancing the capability of the Ngong Ping Nature Centre in providing hiking information for visitors, improving the facilities of country trails in the vicinity, and commissioning a consultancy study for enhancing the facilities of the Hong Kong Wetland Park;

(b) Allocating additional funding to the Travel Industry Council of Hong Kong to encourage the development of more thematic tourism products, organise business forums or business co-operation and exchange activities outside Hong Kong, and provide training subsidies for practitioners to enhance service quality of the trade; and

(c) Commissioning a consultancy study on strategies and initiatives to promote smart tourism in Hong Kong and enhance visitors’ travelling experience through the application of technology. Government will extend the official landing page progressively to all boundary control points. The Tourism Commission will continue to work with the Office of the Government Chief Information Officer to provide free Wi-Fi service at tourist hotspots.
