The most significant development in Hong Kong in the past year must be the enactment of the National Security Law. It marks a turning point to take us out of a tricky political impasse and to restore stability and order from the chaos that has plagued us for a whole year.

As the Chief Executive explains, the law is constitutional, lawful, reasonable and rational. “It will neither undermine the high degree of autonomy, the judicial independence and the rule of law in Hong Kong, nor will it affect the legitimate rights and interests of Hong Kong people.”

The historic decision shows that the Central Government is determined to protect the vast majority of law-abiding citizens in Hong Kong from the minority who attempted to undermine national security. It also shows that the Central Government is determined to preserve and better “One Country, Two Systems”, a principle underlying Hong Kong’s stability and prosperity since the HKSAR was established 23 years ago.

The law targets an extremely small minority of people who commit four types of crimes, namely secession, subversion of state power, organisation and carrying out of terrorist activities, and collusion with foreign or external forces to endanger national security. It serves to protect the life and property, basic rights and freedoms of the overwhelming majority of our citizens.

After a prolonged period of social and political unrest, there is every reason to expect that Hong Kong will emerge stronger with the ensuing stability. When the Covid-19 pandemic is brought under control, Hong Kong will be even better placed than ever to re-build our dynamic economy, and restore our international reputation.

As Hong Kong rallies for a new start, our serviced suites industry stands ready, willing and able to receive overseas investors and businessmen as they put down roots in Hong Kong to capitalize on an exciting new era.
Hong Kong: a thriving metropolis with all the right connections

Hong Kong is an unrivalled place to live and work, witness the 8,000 companies from overseas and Mainland China that have established their businesses here. Rated by the Heritage Foundation of the United States as the world’s freest economy for 25 consecutive years, Hong Kong is a leading international business and financial centre, as well as a regional transportation and logistics hub. In recent decades, it has admirably served as the preferred base and gateway to the fast-growing economy of Mainland China, and the choice location for multinational companies to oversee and manage their regional operations. And in the last few years, it has reinforced its investments and efforts in research and development, especially in association with the southern cities on the Mainland in the Greater Bay Area.

Ticking all the boxes

Many expatriates have fallen in love with our modern cosmopolitan style of living, and have chosen to stay on even when they have finished with their original assignment, or return afterwards to start on a new venture.

The reasons for this love affair are complex and differ with individuals, although their common thoughts of approval encompass Hong Kong’s comprehensive and efficient infrastructure, a vibrant business culture, the rule of law, great shopping and incomparable food, and a friendly, international community. In short, everything clicks to their delight.

It’s true that one has to pay a premium for living in a world-class metropolis, but we certainly make up for it in terms of the quality of service and the amenities on offer. There is a range of accommodation to suit different budgets.

Efficient transport network

Small and compact, Hong Kong has one of the most efficient and comprehensive transport networks in the world, handling a whopping 12 million passenger journeys on a daily basis with a punctuality rate topping 99.9%. Hence distance to/from the CBD is not an over-riding determinant in the choice of accommodation. Indeed, serviced apartments these days have spread all over the city, each with its own unique attractions and target clientele.

Superb connectivity provides guests with greater freedom in the choice of location for their abode, as they take into consideration other factors like their lifestyle, work patterns and budgets. Options can range from buzzing business-cum-pleasure centers on the Island and the Kowloon peninsula, to family-friendly new townships, and the slower-paced, resort-like suburbs in the New Territories and Outlying Islands.

Multi cross-border connections

China traders have a choice of three travel modes: by air, sea, or land. In terms of air travel, Lantau Island has the obvious advantage, but Tsing Yi, West Kowloon and Central are also well served by the Airport Express train line, while other districts are also adequately served by a network of connecting buses.
To catch jetfoil services to the Pearl River Delta, Tsim Sha Tsui enjoys the distinct advantage of having its own Hong Kong-China Pier, and the Ocean Terminal for cruisers. But Kowloon East is not far behind as the Kai Tak Cruise Terminal becomes the home port for an increasing number of cruise lines.

Land commuters favor the convenience of the Northern District with a number of border crossings, but the regular cross-border train services make the Hong Kong terminus, Hung Hom, and its neighboring districts a favorite for China traders. The high-speed through train that originates from West Kowloon is proving very popular with expanded connections to Mainland cities.

And last but not least, with the grandiose plans announced by Government for large-scale infrastructural developments on Lantau Island, it will undoubtedly be the future focus of growth, not to mention the opening of the Hong Kong-Zhuhai-Macau Bridge which adds to commuting convenience and leads to the conceptual development of a catchment area for Hong Kong within a radius of 1.5 hours commuting time.

The China factor

China, of course, looms large in the role it plays in Hong Kong’s current and future economic developments. The Central Government has notched up solid results since launching the initiatives of building the Silk Road Economic Belt and the 21st Century Maritime Silk Road, or ‘Belt & Road’ in short. These economic corridors span different regions in Asia, Europe and Africa, and offer substantial co-development opportunities. In this respect, Hong Kong is well-placed to play a ‘super-connector’ role.

The latest focus is on the development of the Greater Bay Area (GBA), comprising nine major cities in the southern Guangdong province, together with Hong Kong and Macau. It is set to become a globally competitive, world-class metropolis, and play a key role in supporting China’s Belt & Road Initiative. Economists point out that with a total GDP of more than US$1.4 trillion and a population of 68 million, this up-and-coming city cluster in southern China could develop the synergy to become an innovation and technology hub that rivals similar leading global bay areas, such as Tokyo, San Francisco and New York. The GBA will lead China towards a new growth model, with the potential to excel and prosper in such diverse fields as financial technology, renewable energy, biopharma, healthcare, medical equipment, tourism, wealth management and more.

Hong Kong, as an important financial, commercial and maritime centre in the world, can provide Mainland enterprises that seek to “go global” with a wide range of professional services in the financial and legal arenas, including international investment, cross-border trade settlement, Renminbi bond issuance and asset and risk management services, as well as in infrastructural project management services. The establishment and expansion of the Shanghai-Hong Kong Stock Connect and the Shenzhen-Hong Kong Stock Connect facilitate cross-border fund movements and even more collaboration and closer economic ties, while the kick-off of northbound trading in Chinese bonds through the newly-announced Bond Connect further bolsters financial connections.
