Overview

Better times in sight

For the local tourism industry, 2020 has been a complete write-off with tourist arrivals reduced to a trickle due to the Covid-19 pandemic. However, every cloud has a silver lining, and with the progressive roll-out of vaccines on a global basis, there is hope that the world will return to normalcy in due course.

The government is well aware of the hardship local hoteliers have gone through, and on top of the financial support of nearly $2.6 billion that has already been provided to the industry, the Financial Secretary has, in his latest Budget Speech, earmarked a further $934 million to enhance tourism resources, including a number of cultural, heritage and creative projects.

In tourism promotion, government has earmarked $765 million to support the Hong Kong Tourism Board in reviving the tourism industry. Upon gradual resumption of cross-boundary travel, HKTB will be enticing visitors through the ‘Open House Hong Kong’ platform. It is also conducting a comprehensive review of the positioning of Hong Kong’s tourism in the long run in response to the ‘new normal’ after the epidemic, with a view to formulating appropriate strategies to spur its recovery.

So things are looking up, finally, and better times are just around the corner.

Features Editor

Riding out the storm

The tourism industry has, over the last two years, undergone a tumultuous period of unprecedented proportions, and the only comforting note is that, by all accounts, we have now already hit absolute rock bottom, and conditions can only get better.

The first blow to the tourism industry came in mid-2019 with the commencement of social incidents that became increasingly ugly, resulting in a 40% decline in visitor arrivals in the second half of the year. Just as political and economic conditions started to take a turn for the better towards the end of 2020, the outbreak of Covid-19 brought global tourism to an absolute standstill, with visitor arrivals reaching their worst levels since the SARS crisis of 2003.

However, in the midst of this turmoil, let’s not forget Hong Kong’s superlative attractions. It has been rated the world’s most popular city for visitors for the tenth consecutive year in 2020 by the UK-based Euromonitor International, a world-leading independent provider of strategic market research.

As Dr Pang Yiu-kai, Chairman of Hong Kong Tourism Board, points out, the past decade have not always been smooth sailing for our tourism industry, yet the achievement reflects the appeal of Hong Kong as a destination with diverse experiences, an unmatched air traffic network and top-class infrastructure.

Above all, it reflects, he says, the irrepressible spirit of the Hong Kong people and our incredible ability to stand up to any challenge. Throughout the pandemic, Hong Kong citizens have worked together to fight the virus, united in their determination to use innovation and experience to find solutions to carry us through the darkest of days.

This spirit also infuses our tourism industry,” Pang points out, “And there is every reason to believe that Hong Kong people will actively lead the way when we emerge into a new normal for world travel when the global epidemic is under control.”

Pang notes that our airport, our public transport network, and our exhibition venues, for instance, have strengthened their disinfection routines. Hotels, restaurants and tourism related businesses, with the support of the Hong Kong Tourism Board (HKTB), have introduced new protocols and procedures to ensure the health of all customers.

Tourism attractions meanwhile have put in place new booking arrangements. All of these important steps have been taken with one goal in mind: To ensure that the Hong Kong public and visitors feel safe in our city.

Although there are greater immediate challenges for us all, tourism matters to Hong Kong, Pang emphasizes. The industry brings in hundreds of billions of dollars in revenue every year and is a key pillar of our economy. The Hong Kong SAR Government recognizes this fact and provides staunch support for our tourism industry and the HKTB, with resources to face up to fiercer regional competition and to win back visitors in the post-pandemic era.

“Hong Kong has weathered many storms in the past, and we have always emerged stronger. With determination, resilience and our can-do spirit, I am certain we will ride out this very massive storm," Pang concludes. “We look forward to Hong Kong emerging into a new era of growth and prosperity for our tourism industry, and to the future success of the economy of our extraordinary city.”
